

International and interprofessional module in health care provision in a global community

In a globalised society health professionals are faced with changes in the health care sector. These courses offer a unique opportunity to learn with, from and about each in order to improve the student's knowledge and skills in collaboration with health and other professionals to provide quality of care. The three units aim at developing the students' competencies in:

Interprofessional Collaboration in Health and Community Practice (10 ECTS)

- To appreciate the influence of diversity and transcultural needs in a global society
- To provide the students with skills in interprofessional collaboration in health care teams in community practice
- Health informatics, with focus on e-Health, welfare technologies and e-Patients development in order to meet the health and social needs of the population in the 21st century.

Nursing Management of Chronic Illness and Home Health Nursing (10 ECTS):

- Identify risk factors, and based on available evidence select appropriate risk management and health promotion strategies to promote optimal independence and quality patient outcomes in relation to health promotion, prevention, treatment and rehabilitation
- Develop clinical decisions making skills in managing the care of patients living with a chronic illness.
- Communicate with patients, families, peers, interprofessional staff within the health care sector as well as intersectorial, to facilitate provision of care and quality patient outcomes.

Nursing Management and Intervention (10ects)

- Opportunities to develop a systematic body of knowledge that informs their problem solving capabilities, skill development in clinical reasoning in Nursing
- Skills in clinical methods such as observation, assessments, and interventions to patients with acute health problems
- To provide the student's potential for understanding the professional, organizational, and social context of Nursing

The courses take place in an international and interprofessional learning environment. They commence last week of August (week 35) and end mid December for Australian students, and end of January for Danish and European students. January is clinical practice for the Danish Students (compulsory). Language of instruction is in English

Read more and find the online application form at <http://www.viauc.com/exchange/nursing>

Tuition is free of charge for students from our bilateral partners.

VIA offers accommodation within walking distance from the campus. Students pay for accommodation, travel, local transport and living expenses.

Futher info: www.viauc.com/exchange/nursing